Under general supervision, Vocational Habilitation Trainers develop and provide individual and group vocational habilitation training programs and coordinate related services for the vocational habilitation of clients with mental illnesses.

Perform vocational habilitation assessment by reviewing the clinical record, interviewing the client, the client’s family and co-workers, taking a work history and administering formal and informal tests for vocational interest, aptitude and work in order to document the results in the clinical record.

Participate in multidisciplinary treatment teams to give feedback on test results, make recommendations for treatment goals and receive information on the client as related to other disciplines and their treatment goals.

Provide group sessions to clients in order to teach such things as work attitude, work behaviors, work skills, social interaction, employer-employee relationships, personal grooming and appearance, coping behavior and job seeking skills using verbal presentation, task analysis and assignment, work activity, role playing, observation and critique.

Provide individual vocational sessions to clients by analyzing tasks, teaching and modeling skills, observing client demonstrations, providing feedback, and removing self from experience in order to assist clients to re-enter, enter or maintain a position in competitive or supported employment and/or volunteer assignments.

Conduct ongoing vocational habilitation assessment; document attendance and progress towards collaboratively developed treatment goals and objectives in the electronic medical record and other agency formats as needed.

Consult with other agency staff and staff of other human services programs to provide linkage, monitoring and follow-up services.

Provide support services to clients upon hospital discharge by serving on treatment team and consulting/interacting with other programs, facilities, family members and employers; and arrange transportation for agency clients to attend relevant meetings and interviews.

Participate in program development by preparing materials for group presentations to communities/employers/agencies regarding employment of individuals with mental illnesses; and develop work contacts and supported employment positions.

Perform related duties as assigned.
