SERIES CONCEPT

Disability Adjudicators evaluate disability claims and make determinations in accordance with laws, rules, regulations, policies and procedures governing Social Security Disability Programs. Work involves the evaluation of medical evidence to make judgments about the presence, onset, clinical severity and prognosis of physical or mental impairments and determination of the vocational potential of claimants in order to allow or deny Social Security benefits.

Interview applicants to obtain personal history; communicate in writing and/or telephone with claimants who are injured, terminally ill and may be in personal distress; verify, develop and document required medical and vocational evidence; review applications for completeness; request and authorize payments for existing collateral medical, psychological, vocational and employment information necessary to make disability determinations; recommend the purchase of consultative examinations.

Integrate physical, mental and vocational functional assessments to determine the combined effects and severity of impairment in compliance with Social Security Administration regulations; consult with program physicians and psychologists to resolve conflicts with medical evidence and determine clinical severity and/or residual functional capacity; apply federal regulations, procedures and standards to findings of fact and abstract medical and vocational concepts; establish the onset of the disability.

Compile the entire body of evidence into a written medical/legal determination of disability which documents the medical and vocational facts, statutory requirements, and the occupational potential of the claimant; evaluate symptoms and alleged limitations to determine credibility; evaluate the consistency of treating/examining source statements and opinions; prepare personalized determination notices using appropriate lay language to inform claimants of disability determinations.

Provide medical case management for disability claims that require medical consultation (“Case Management” is defined as the ability to organize, prioritize and analyze varied and complex information, regulations, policies and procedures to arrive at timely and accurate decisions regarding claims in one’s caseload).

Conduct comprehensive vocational analysis of the claimant's vocational background, education, age, relevant work experience, and demonstrated functional capacity for gainful employment; determine ability to perform jobs within the local and national economy; act as an agency resource providing advice and guidance to consulting physicians and claims adjudicators.

Perform related duties as assigned.

supervise activities of a unit of Disability Adjudicators; provide input for employee selection; provide training and guidance for staff development; delegate authority and responsibility; assign work based on workers' caseloads, skill level and experience; review and approve requests for consultative examinations to ensure need is documented; assist in the resolution of difficult casework problems; establish work performance standards, evaluate performance, and initiate disciplinary actions. In addition, incumbents in this class ensure continuity of adjudication services by performing duties assigned to other positions in the agency during staff shortages or absences and may monitor the caseload management of subordinate adjudicators to ensure the adjudication of claims meets goals for accuracy, production and timeliness established by the agency and the Social Security Administration; review decisions to ensure compliance with applicable policies and procedures; resolve case deficiencies; respond to claimant inquiries; participate in program planning and implementation; and ensure budgetary limits are not exceeded.

Disability Adjudicator III: Under general direction, incumbents perform journey level claims adjudication, which includes the authority to complete final determinations without review or approval of medical or psychological consultants. This class is distinguished from the lower levels by the independence and level of decision-making.

In addition, incumbents provide advice, guidance and training to lower level Disability Adjudicators regarding complex medical and vocational issues and the application of applicable regulations, guidelines and standards; research, clarify and interpret changes in federal laws and agency procedures; review casework to identify deficiencies; assist other Disability Adjudicators at direction of the supervisor.

Disability Adjudicator II: Under general supervision, incumbents continue to receive training in performing the full range of duties described in the series concept; independently secure necessary evidence and apply program regulations, guidelines and standards to arrive at conclusions relative to disability issues. Technical assistance is available from supervisors, higher-level staff, and medical and psychological consultants. Work is reviewed on a sample basis for accuracy of the determination and compliance with federal and agency requirements.

The Disability Adjudicator II is distinguished from the Disability Adjudicator I class by the complexity of assigned claims and the level of independence with which assigned duties are performed. Progression to the journey level is not automatic, but may occur upon meeting the minimum qualifications, satisfactory performance and with the approval of the appointing authority.

Disability Adjudicator I: Under close supervision, incumbents receive training and gain experience in the development, evaluation, and adjudication of disability claims. This is the trainee class in the series. Determinations and submittals made at this level are regularly reviewed for accuracy of determination and compliance with federal and agency requirements. Progression to the next level in the series may occur upon meeting the minimum qualifications, satisfactory performance and with the approval of the appointing authority.
